In moving for the dismissal of the petition on the ground of lack of jurisdiction, respondent Commissioner of Internal Revenue contends:

"Respondent has not yet rendered a decision on the protest of petitioner. Hence, petitioner's appeal to this Court, without awaiting the decision of respondent on its protest, is premature; consequently, this Honorable Court acquires no jurisdiction over this case. As the Supreme Court said in the Villa case, "the jurisdiction of the Tax Court is to review by appeal decisions of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue on disputed assessments. The Tax Court is a court of special jurisdiction. As such, it can take cognizance only of such matters as are clearly within its jurisdiction." (Commissioner vs. Villa, infra.)

Before us for resolution is respondent's "Motion to Dismiss" filed by him on March 13, 1984 alleging, among others, that petitioner without awaiting the decision of respondent on its protest dated February 8, 1983 interposed its appeal to this Court. Hence, petitioner's appeal is premature and the Court acquires no jurisdiction on the petition for review.

Petitioner however interposed its opposition to the said motion on March 16, 1984, contending that a final decision of respondent denying its protest has been received by it on July 22, 1983. Hence, the appeal is not prematurely filed, and the Court has jurisdiction over the case.

The law conferring jurisdiction on the Court of Tax Appeals is found in Section 7 of Republic Act

No. 1125, the pertinent part of which states:

"Sec. 7. Jurisdiction. - The Court of Tax Appeals shall exercise exclusive appellate jurisdiction to review by appeal as herein provided -

(1) Decisions of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue in cases involving disputed assessments, refunds of internal revenue taxes, fees or other charges, penalties imposed in relation thereto, or other matters arising under the National Internal Revenue Code or other law or part of the law administered by the Bureau of Internal Revenue;

(2) . xxx xxx xxx

(3) . xxx xxx xxx

The Court of Tax Appeals is a court of special jurisdiction. As such, it can take cognizance only of such matters as are clearly within its jurisdiction. The jurisdiction of a court to take cognizance of a case should be conferred clearly and should not be deemed to exist on mere implication, or affirmation of a party to the action, specially so with this Court which is a specialized court of limited jurisdiction. (Victorias Milling Co., Inc. vs. The Philippine Ports Authority, CTA Case No. 3466, October 26, 1983, certiorari denied in G.R. No. 66381, Feb. 29, 1984; see also Amilbangsa v. Angangco, CTA Case No. 255, May 7, 1956.) It is worth noting that the word "decision" as appearing in Section 7(1) of Republic Act No. 1125 has been interpreted by the Supreme Court in the case of Commissioner of Internal Revenue vs. Leonardo S. Villa, et al., January 2, 1968, 22 SCRA 3, to mean the decision of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue on the protest of the taxpayer against the assessment. The Supreme Court further stated:

"The same interpretation finds support in Section 11 of Republic Act 1125, which states:

Sec. 11. Who may appeal: effect of appeal.- Any person, association or corporation adversely affected by a decision or ruling of the Collector (now Commissioner) of Internal Revenue, the Collector (Commissioner) of Customs or any provincial or city Board of Assessment Appeals may file an appeal in the Court of Tax Appeals within thirty days after the receipt of such decision or ruling. (Emphasis supplied)]

Note that the law uses the word "decisions", not "assessments", thus further indicating the legislative intention to subject to judicial review the decision of the Commissioner on the protest against an assessment but not the assessment itself." (Underlining supplied.)

Petitioner's allegation that a decision has been rendered by respondent on its protest and the same has been received by it on July 22, 1983 is not substantiated by the evidence. Records of the Bureau of Internal Revenue pertinent to this case do not show that a decision has been rendered by respondent in connection with petitioner's protest. Neither is there a copy of the alleged decision attached to the petition for review as required by Section 2, Rule 5, of the Rules of Court of Tax Appeals. Even more, when the said motion to dismiss

DECISION -

of respondent was heard by the Court on April 26, 1984, petitioner failed to present the alleged decision which it claimed to have received on July 22, 1983. Respondent Commissioner of Internal Revenue having averred in his motion to dismiss that he has not yet rendered a decision on the protest of petitioner, the bare allegation of petitioner that on July 22, 1983 it received the final decision of respondent denying completely its protest, unaccompanied by adequate evidence, has therefore no weight with the Court. Under these circumstances, we believe that no decision was rendered by respondent in this case which is appealable to this Court. The appeal therefore is premature and the Court has no jurisdiction to entertain the instant case.

WHEREFORE, the petition for review is hereby dismissed at petitioner's costs.

SO ORDERED.
